(7c) ABSTRACT

A vertical lift aircraft includes a central cabin and a set of concentric, circular, pressure-resistant power blade assemblies. Gas turbine engines located in the central cabin provide power for rotating the power blade assemblies to cause lift and motion of the aircraft. The turbine engine exhaust gases are directed through a suitable exhaust nozzle for exiting to the front and rear of the aircraft. The gas turbine engines drive electric power generators which provide the necessary power for operation of the aircraft.
